CRAFT REDESIGNED

Founded by Niko Kralj in Slovenia in 1952, furniture company Rex Kralj has become known for its contribution to 20th century industrial design. Today, the company continues in his legacy and sheds new light on these iconic designs.

THE FUTURE LIES IN THE PAST

Niko Kralj has made an important contribution to 20th century industrial design with minimalistic designs that are both functional and beautiful. In 1962 Niko Kralj received the highest Slovenian award for culture — the Prešeren Award — for his achievements in the field of architecture and design.

COLLECTION

2017

The Rex Kralj furniture collection includes a variety of chairs, stools, coffee and dining tables, and even a daybed. We value simplicity and believe that details make all the difference.

Championing comfort and convenience

Part of Rex Kralj's foldable furniture collection dating back to the 1950s, the Rex Chair is much more than a folding chair. This work of art combines unique design and great folding functionality, making it a classic piece of furniture fit for every household. Who said convenient couldn't be stylish?

Designed in the past, created for the future

The cornerstone of Rex Kralj's foldable furniture collection dating back to 1956, the Rex Lounge now has a place in the permanent collection of Designmuseum Danmark in Copenhagen. Using a combination of moulded plywood and routed slots, the iconic Rex Lounge offers maximum comfort and is easy to use. While it can be stowed neatly to save space, you'll never want to fold this one away.

A rocker fit for a king

This modern rocking chair is part of Rex Kralj's foldable furniture collection that dates back to the 1950s. Reminiscent of a deck chair, thanks to the perforated wood construction, this rocking chair exudes a feeling of ultimate relaxation and comfort. This exemplary piece of design does exactly what a rocking chair should do, and more.

Retro flair for every interior

The Rex 120 is as stylish today as when it was first produced in 1953. Part of the Rex chair collection, it breathes the effortless minimalism that makes this set of furniture so unique. The curved wooden armrests create a striking look while providing the utmost comfort. With its retro flair, this minimalistic design is perfect for every interior.

Fusing form and function

A table that's more than just a surface; the Rex Coffee Table is always there when you need it. Part of Rex Kralj's foldable furniture collection dating back to the 1950s, this coffee table fits in every home. Form and function fuse together seamlessly in the design, making it a welcomed addition to any interior.

Created for every body

Designed in 1957, this foldable daybed is anything but old fashioned. Made of the finest materials, the Rex Daybed can be used for an afternoon nap by little ones, or can be used to store or display your finest accessories – the daybed is a welcomed addition to any space. The foldable quality is a bonus; pop it up when you need it or store it away when no longer in use. Dare we say, ergonomic design at its best.

Sophisticated in its simplicity

One of Rex Kralj's most well known pieces, the Shell Lounge is a magnificent example of the craftsmanship perfected by the company's founder Niko Kralj. Sophisticated in its simplicity, the chair's two uniquely formed plywood panels are balanced on either side of the chair. With its bold look and sharp angles, the Shell Lounge has a powerful presence and is sure to make a statement.

Minimalist comfort

Like Rex Kralj's infamous Shell Lounge, the Shell Chair remains one of Niko Kralj's most exemplary designs. Dating back to 1956, the Shell Chair is known for its remarkable construction; two formed plywood panels come together on both sides, making this piece both easy on the eyes and the body.

Striking in appearance yet comfortable in use

The Shell Armchair is another exemplary chair from the Rex Kralj Shell collection. Characterized by the two plywood panels that make up the chairs' unique shape, this Armchair will not go unnoticed. The armrests ensure that you will be comfortable when seated for longer than usual, attending a meeting, or dining at a restaurant.

Simple in form yet classic in style

Geometric lines meet smooth curves in this 1960s chair. Though rigid in its look, the chair retains a likeable softness with its rounded edges; instead of contrasts, the shapes create harmony. Simple in form yet classic in style, the 1960 Chair embodies retro chic.

Light like the flight of a mosquito

Named after its wing-like seat, the Mosquito chair is a true eye-catcher. Following in the footsteps of Eames' moulded plywood experiments in the 1940s, the chair did not go into production when it was first created in 1953. Fortunately, thanks to the recent efforts of Rex Kralj to finally bring this exemplary chair to life, design enthusiasts can enjoy the patent-protected design today.

Simplicity in design

Dating back to 1955, this chair is a unique statement made by the furniture company's founder Niko Kralj. With its no-fuss appeal, light and durable construction, and stackable functionality, the 4455 Chair embraces simplicity in design. As the first Rex Kralj product to feature a bent backrest, it's comfort doesn't go unnoticed.

Back to basics

This unusual stool was the starting point of Rex Kralj's collection of products featuring the unique cross connection. The upper part of the stool appears to float effortlessly above the cross connection. Characterized by its clean lines and minimalistic appearance, designer Niko Kralj managed to redefine this simple piece of furniture.

Revisiting a classic

An extension of the original Stool CC, the iconic design is now available as a bar stool. Characterized by its clean lines and minimalistic appearance, the upper part of the stool appears to float effortlessly above the cross connection.

Contemporary perspectives

Now there's the chance to experience the unique design of the Stool CC in a variety of ways: the original stool, a bar stool, a table, or a dining table. Contemporary perspectives fuse with the unique design of the 1954 Stool CC to create a table that champions the key feature, the cross connection.

The centrepiece of the home

The cross connection makes an appearance again, this time in the shape of a dining table. Based on the unique design of the 1954 Stool CC, the Dining Table CC is characterised by its clean lines and minimalistic appearance. Often considered the centrepiece of the home, this table will not only make a statement in the space, but will be the place for eating and socialising for years to come.
